LATEST PAPER IN WESTERN KENTUCKY

HICKMAN, FULTON COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1908.

WHOLE NO. 2414
ESTABLISHED IN THE YEAR 1859

Death of J. T. Fuller.

As mentioned briefly in last week's paper, Tom Fuller died at 7 o'clock last Thursday morning at his home a few miles below this city.

Mr. Fuller had been sick for several weeks, and hopes for his recovery were entertained until Wednesday when he gradually grew worse. Death was due to typhoid fever.

The burial services were held at the city cemetery here Friday, in the presence of a large assembly of friends.

Deceased leaves a wife and four children, besides a host of friends, to mourn his loss. He was a good man—big hearted, honest and ever ready to help those in need. In his neighborhood he was recognized as a leader in all worthy undertakings, and held in high esteem by all. At times he was just plain "Tom," and such men as him are always missed from any community.

May he rest in peace.

Frank Cooley, charged with selling intoxicating liquors in this county, compromised his cases by paying $100 and agreeing to leave Fulton. Cooley has filed two suits for damages against U. S. Shacklett et al., and these will not be prosecuted.

Evans Re-Arrested.

The Mayfield Messenger says—Will Evans, charged with stealing a horse from Bob James some months ago, is now in the Mayfield jail, Chief McNutt having brought him from Fulton where he was acquitted Wednesday on a horse stealing charge. Just as the court released Evans from custody at Fulton he made a dash for liberty but in this he reckoned without his hosts as Chief McNutt was in the court room and nabbed Evans and brought him here to answer to the charge.

Miss Ethel Nelson, of the Courier staff, and sister, Miss Victoria, left Tuesday for Water Valley, Ky., where they will spend two weeks with relatives.

Lynching Narrowly Averted.

Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock, a negro, supposed to have been crazed from the effects of cocaine, got "bad" and proceeded to curse out the white population of the city, using the vilest kind of oaths. The negro was on Water street, behind the Farmers Hardware store, and when seen and told by John T. Dillon and Deputy Sheriff Golder Johnson that he must desist from the use of such language, he showed fight and was insulting in his reply to them. A fight ensued, and it required the strength of two or three good men to handle him. The negro's loud swearing and the tussel which followed brought more than a hundred men and boys to the scene, and it was with difficulty that the officers kept the crowd from stringing him up. Mob spirit was rampant for a few minutes. The timely arrival of Sheriff Seat is all that saved his neck. Even then, the negro's head was used for a punching-bag, pins thrust into his body and the like before his protectors could land him behind the bars. The negro's name is German Adkisson, about 25 years old and works for S. L. Dodds, a few miles below Hickman.

In the police court Monday he was fined $25 and costs for being drunk and disorderly. Marshal Dillon has him working on the streets, and that's a commendable move.

Prof. J. H. Saunders, candidate for County Judge, gave The Courier a check for $2 this week to be added to the Democratic Campaign Fund. This is a good example for a lot of other folks.

Luby Mayes, of Wingo, and Miss Pearl Martin, of Nayfield, were married in Fulton, Friday.

Tight Wad Candidates.

There have only been two announcements made in Fulton county newspapers by candidates for offices of the First Judicial District, namely: Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney. Those who have shown enough respect for the newspapers and the people whom the newspapers represent to make a public announcement are Hon. Harry J. Moorman, of Mayfield, for Judge; and Hon. J. B. Wickliffe, of Wickliffe, for Attorney. There are others out for this office, but some of them sneak by the newspaper offices as cautiously as a deacon entering the back door of a saloon, on Sunday.

Editor Williams, of the Fulton Leader, has this to say concerning the new precedent, and we endorse it:

"We understand that certain candidates have gone into an agreement not to announce their candidacy in the county Democratic newspapers in the district. The candidate who has so little party pride that he won't pay for an announcement of his candidacy is 'few potatoes in the hill.'"

"The Leader is a Democratic party paper and supports all nominees, but when a fellow who is able to pay, is too tight wadded to pay his way, we think he is too penurious to make a good officer."

"Now to show that our heart is in the right place any candidate before the primary who will come around and tell us he is too poor to pay for his printing will be announced free."

"Common honesty is the best policy always. This old poor talk is out of date—especially among lawyers. Who ever heard of a lawyer going to the poor house?"

Democracy Coming to it's Own.

There comes the tread of marching thousands. Tramp, tramp, tramp, heavier and heavier it grows. On, on to battle, a splendid victory to win—not that mothers sons may from their arms be torn, not that human blood may run but that the starving may be fed the ragged ones be clothed; that labor its true recompense many take; merit its just reward receive; that dishonest wealth may cease; the lust for gold be killed; that hearts may be bigger and kindlier grow; that life may be simpler, and that honor, virtue and truth may be the nation's goal.

This is the battle they wage, this splendid reunited army of Democracy. Led by him whose heart of all hearts is nearest and most attuned to the heart of the great people, victory is theirs. It is written among the stars. At last Democracy is coming unto her own.

Why Don't They Go?

A prominent minister of this city recently asked a Courier man if we had any idea why the attendance at the various churches is not any larger than it is. We know that the congregations are hardly more than one-half as large as they should be, considering our population, but on the spur of the moment we were unable to account for it. By a personal investigation, we find that folks make the following excuses, which if eliminated will insure larger audiences:

- 1—Don't want to climb the hill.
- 2—Men sulk if wife goes.
- 3—Unmarried women have no escorts.
- 4—Sunday dinner.
- 5—Afraid of the basket for contributions.
- 6—Taking bath, washing hair, or doing chores.
- 7—Lack of early training.
- 8—Too busy or want to rest.
- 9—Church not advertised enough.
- 10—Abundance of good and inexpensive reading.
- 11—Busy "fixing 'round the house."
- 12—Church stirs up conscience and makes people think.
- 13—Lack of sociability in church.
- 14—Lack of will power to go.
- 15—Too many hypocrites.
- 16—Minister does not adapt himself to "conditions."
- 17—Spirit will, but flesh too weak.
- 18—Clothes not good enough.
- 19—Church has too many side issues.

No doubt, equally as many—and better—reasons can be advanced as to why we should attend church, but what manner of man can abolish so many negatives?

Porters "Tuff-Steel" razors will follow Porter's "Tuff-Glass" lamp chimneys into universal use, just like a duck takes to water.

Woodmen Entertain.

Household No. 5. Columbian Woodmen, of this city, had a big barbecue and love feast at Sulpher Springs, Friday night, at which a large number of visiting woodmen and their friends were entertained.

Besides a bountiful spread of good edibles, Hunzikers Concert Band gave them a concert in their usual splendid style. A number of good talks were made, and all present enjoyed themselves in every sense of the word.

WRIGHT AIRSHIP FALLS

LIEUT. SELFRIDGE OF SIGNAL CORPS KILLED.

Machine Which Has Scored Several World's Records a Total Loss.

Washington.—After having drawn the attention of the world to his aeroplane flights at Fort Myer, and having established new world's records for heavier-than-air flying machines, Orville Wright today met with a tragical mishap while making a two-man flight. The aeroplane was accompanied by Lieut. Thos. E. Selfridge, of the signal corps of the army. Lieut. Selfridge was fatally injured and died at 8:10 o'clock tonight. Mr. Wright was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

While the machine was encircling the drill grounds a propeller blade snapped off, and, hitting some other part of the intricate mechanism, caused it to overturn in the air and fall to the ground, enveloping the two occupants in the debris.

Soldiers and spectators ran to where the aeroplane had fallen and assisted in lifting Mr. Wright and Lieut. Selfridge from under the tangled mass of machinery, rods, wires and shreds of muslin. Mr. Wright was conscious, and said: "Oh, hurry and lift the motor."

Lieut. Selfridge was unconscious and had apparently struck the ground with great force. His head was covered with blood and he was choking when the soldiers extricated him from under the machine.

NEAR RIOT AT OYSTER BAY

Prominent Citizen Roughly Handled
by Secret Service Men.

Oyster Bay.—President Roosevelt's reception to the villagers today nearly ended in a riot when secret service men held up Charles Kursman, the leading business man of Oyster Bay. Mr. Kursman, accompanied by two ladies, attempted to approach the president, who was receiving all visitors. A secret service man grabbed Mr. Kursman and told him that he would not be allowed to approach the president.

Mr. Kursman, as he tells the story, said tonight:

"I thought it a matter of precedence, and I waited patiently. After every one else had shaken hands with the president I started forward again. Once more I was stopped. The secret service man said that a complaint had been made against me. I demanded that I should be allowed to see the president, his secretary or the chief of the secret service."

While Mr. Kursman was protesting the women with him began to cry. The two hundred spectators were quickly attracted to the scene. Finally James Stone, head of the secret service, came up. He recognized Mr. Kursman and called Secretary Loebe.

The two conducted Mr. Kursman to the president, who received the merchant cordially.

Mr. Kursman is not only the leading merchant in Oyster Bay, but he is a member of the president's lodge of Masons.

SENSATION AT CLARKSVILLE

Witnesses in Murder Case Are Charged With Night Riding.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Following the adjournment of criminal court this afternoon, five of the State witnesses who testified that they were with Vaughn Bennett on the night he was shot were arrested and placed under a bond of $1,000, charged with night riding.

They are Charles Hogan, Oscar Albright, Elsie Albright, John Sadler and Dave Chambliss.

Testimony introduced today has been sensational, confessions being made that the party of which Bennett was a member were out that night masked, with a white badge on, which is said to be the insignia of the night riders. The witnesses denied having committed any depredations other than the cutting of telephone wires, and said they went out to witness the whipping of a man named Welsh at Port Royal, which was scheduled for that night by another party of men.

NIGHT RIDER SUIT.

Relative of Man Killed Sues His Slayer.

Frankfort, Ky.—Suit for $25,000 damages was filed in the Shelby circuit court today by the widow and children of Newton Hazlett against Walker Duncan, a wealthy farmer.

The suit grows out of the killing of Hazlett, an alleged night rider, whose body was found in Pike, near Jackson, on May 21 last. Duncan was charged with the murder of Hazlett by the grand jury, but was pardoned before trial by Gov. Willson, in pursuance of the governor's policy to grant executive clemency to all persons who defended their persons and property from night rider outrages.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION

ONE KILLED AND SEVENTEEN INJURED.

Houses Blown to Bits and Box Cars
Reduced to Splinters—Cattle Killed a Mile Away.

McAlester, Okla.—In a powder house explosion here this afternoon one man, Arthur Richards, was killed and seventeen injured. The heavy plate glass windows in nearly every business house in McAlester, two miles distant, were shattered and many buildings badly shaken. People rushed from their houses, thinking an earthquake was upon them.

The powder house contained a car load of dynamite and 1,300 kegs of black powder. A row of miners' houses 200 yards distant were blown to bits and sixteen box cars were reduced to splinters. A hole twenty-five feet deep and fifty feet in diameter marks the site of the explosion, which was caused by lightning. The pastures were filled with dead cows and horses for a mile around.

The dead man was sitting at a table in his house a mile distant when a rock crashed through the side of the house, cutting off his head as though it had been severed with a knife. The body was thrown across the room. Another rock wrecked the house.

MISS HELEN MALONEY

Says She Married Osborne to Avoid Titled Foreigner.

New York.—Fear that she might be compelled by her parents to marry a titled foreigner whom she disliked was the reason which Helen Maloney, daughter of wealthy Martin Maloney, of Philadelphia, declared impelled her to go through a marriage ceremony with Arthur Herbert Osborne, a young broker of this city. This information, given by Miss Maloney under oath, when she was being examined by a referee in connection with her application to have the purported marriage annulled, was gleaned from papers in the case which were filed in court after a formal decree finally annulling the marriage, was granted today by Justice Gerard, in the Supreme Court.

Miss Maloney swore that the marriage never was regarded in a serious light, either by herself or Osborne. She did not believe the contract binding, inasmuch as the contracting parties did not give their right names, ages or names of their parents.

KENTUCKY IS EMULATED.

Reports of Night Rider Activity From Northeastern Arkansas.

Jonesboro, Ark.—A rumor is being circulated broadcast here to the effect that bands of night riders formed from the farmers in this section have been at work notifying the planters to hold their cotton, and giving them explicit instructions to cut their acreage or bear the consequences.

The report that a well known farmer in Lunsford had been whipped is without foundation, but in the past week several cotton growers have been threatened by the riders, and their actions have caused a great deal of alarm in this section, especially among the buyers and ginners. While a great many of the reports of alleged outrages have been denied, still in several cases well known farmers have been approached in no uncertain way and impressed with the fact that they must obey orders given by the secret band.

WRIGHT BREAKS RECORD.

Makes 39-Minute Flight, Covering 26 Miles.

Lemans.—Wilbur Wright, the aeroplane pilot, of Dayton, O., broke all European records today for sustained airplane flight. He remained in the air for 39 minutes and 15 seconds. On the field of Auvers this morning Mr. Wright circled the course at an average height of 45 feet. He again demonstrated his complete mastery over his machine. He covered 26 miles.

NEW YORK DEMOCRACY

Names Chanler for Governor—But One Stormy Incident.

Rochester, N. Y.—The Democratic State Convention today nominated as the head of its ticket for governor the present lieutenant governor of the State, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, of Dutchess county.

The ticket decided upon by the leaders, with one exception, seemed to meet the approval of all the delegates, and the nominations were made with great enthusiasm until the office of State engineer and surveyor was reached.

The conference candidate was Philip P. Farley, of Brooklyn, an anti-McCarren man. Senator McCarren, amid the cheers of his supporters, took the platform "to resent an insult." He declared the nomination of Farley was agreed to without any regard to the Kings county delegation, and was intended to embarrass them.

He declared he would always support Democratic nominees, but would not hold himself responsible for the action of people who felt themselves insulted. Farley won on a roll call, but a motion to make the nomination unanimous was lost by two or three scattering negatives.

MAY USE ELECTRIC POWER

Illinois Central Railroad Will Investigate Feasibility.

Chicago.—J. T. Harahan, president of the Illinois Central Railway, announced today at a meeting of the board of directors of the road, held at New York, that authority was granted for a full investigation of the question of electrifying the Illinois Central terminals at Chicago.

In making the announcement Mr. Harahan said:

"It is the purpose of the company to go into this question fully and immediately, securing the most able experts in the country to investigate the matter. After a full and complete investigation a report will be made to the board of directors on the subject."

The Illinois Central Railroad enters Chicago along the shore of Lake Michigan and operates a suburban service from the business district to the South Side and suburban stations on the line. The smoke from the 700 trains used daily in this way has been a subject of complaint for years by residents of the South Side.

PLAN TO FIGHT AEROPLANES

Government Will Arrange to Hold Aerial Target Practice.

Washington.—Being assured by the success of the Wright aeroplane that aerial warships are to be the adjuncts of all armies and navies soon, ordnance experts of the War Department are studying a solution of the problem of meeting and overcoming them.

Aerial target practice will be held. Old balloons, owned by the signal corps, will be the targets. The tests will be made at Fort Omaha, where there is an aero park. Similar tests are being made in Germany. The Germans have found that balloons hit at great height do not collapse.

Army men realize that it will be no light matter to provide for the elevation of large field guns which could destroy an aeroplane at one shot.

It is the belief that the perfection of the aeroplane will mean the gradual dissolution of navies and the relegation of the $8,000,000 battleship to the national junk shop. Army men say that when a machine costing eight or ten million dollars, that has taken two years at the building, that carries a thousand officers and men, can be sunk by a flying machine that is made for $3,000, it is time to sit down and consider.

Guthrie, Okla.—Specialists arrived here today to attend Federal Marshal John R. Abernathy, suffering from leishmaniasis as the result of being bitten by Leishman wolves two weeks ago in Wichita Mountains, while showing hunters and his child bride how he catches 'em alive with his hands. His condition is critical, and the specialists may amputate one of his arms. Abernathy was to hunt with Roosevelt in Africa.

BIG CEMENT PLANT BURNS.

Blaze Started in Kiln that Spread Rapidly—Loss $200,000.

Louisville, Ky.—The plant of the Kosmosdale Cement Co. at Kosmosdale, 17 miles from this city, suffered a loss of $200,000 by fire. The blaze originated in the coal bin of the kiln, where a constant heat of 1,800 degrees is maintained.

Five raw mills, the power house and the kilns were razed.

An Illinois Central engine darted in and out amid the burning buildings and took out to safety thousands of barrels of cement. There were 300 men at work in the plant, which has a working force of 500, when the fire began, and General Manager C. M. Dugan sent the alarm into the city and by the time the department responded the flames were leaping skyward to the southwest and could easily be seen here.

The buildings were constructed of solid concrete. The plant is the largest in the south and is worth many millions of dollars.

RECEIVER ASKED

For Hargis Estate By Daughter—Brother Asks For Bail.

Lexington, Ky.—Suit was filed at Jackson by Mrs. Evelyn Hogg, daughter of the late Judge James Hargis, against her mother, Mrs. Lewellyn Hargis, and brother, Beach Hargis, seeking to have the department store and all other Hargis estate property placed in the hands of a receiver. The property is worth about $150,000.

In circuit court Beach Hargis made a motion for bail through his attorney, D. B. Redwine. Grounds for renewal of the motion were that the health of young Hargis is in such condition that continued confinement will result in his death. In support of this motion, Hargis filed affidavits of several physicians.

Judge Adams, however, declined to grant the patricide bail. Hargis is said to be suffering from tuberculosis. It is understood the Hargis family is willing to furnish bail in any amount up to $50,000.

Wilmore, Ky.—Rev. H. E. Rosenberry, aged 31, formerly of Mayslick, Mason county, and a minister of the Methodist church, induced Miss Carrie Mastin, aged 15, of this place, to run away with him.

They proceeded to Harrisburg, where he purchased tickets to Chattanooga. They are supposed to be en route to his birthplace, in New Mexico. Telegrams to apprehend them were sent to the principal cities of the south.

Rosenberry stated that he was going to join his wife in Louisville. Mrs. Mastin, mother of the girl, is prostrated over the affair. Rosenberry held a series of protracted meetings at Mayslick a month ago, and was asked to resign by the conference of the Methodist church and expelled from the church at a session at Millersburg, Ky.

WATER SITUATION SERIOUS.

Towns Husband Supply on Hand For Fire Protection.

Lexington, Ky.—Central Kentucky is suffering from the worst drought in years, and unless there is rain in a few days the crops of all descriptions will be badly damaged.

The supply of stock water on the farms has been exhausted and farmers are forced to haul water for long distances.

North Elkhorn creek is dry for the first time in many years and many wells and cisterns have suddenly gone dry.

The towns of Danville, Winchester and Richmond have denied the citizens further use of the water supply, saving it in case of fire, and they must resort to cisterns and wells.

Corn, hemp and tobacco are suffering the worst. Fires along the railroads are destroying much fencing and valuable trees.

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Condr. S. P. Ry., Tex.
San Ness St., San Antonio, Tex.
writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna."

"Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Every one thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long."

"Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime."

"The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life."

"I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

READY REASONING.

One Guess About Venus of Milo
Proved to Be Wrong.

They stood before the reproducing of the Venus of Melos.

"Her hands must have been beautiful," said one.

"Very," assented the other. "I wonder what position they were in?" "I have a theory that she was represented as bused at her toilet."

"And the other a powder puff, eh? But that theory won't work."

"And why not?" "Had she been at her toilet her mouth would have been full of hairpins."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

When the Minister Scored.

A country clergyman, while recently advocating the support of a charitable object, prefaced the circulation of the plate with the following address: "From the great sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, there is only one thing I am afraid of—that some of you may feel inclined to give too much. Now, it is my duty to inform you that justice should always be a prime virtue to generosity; therefore, I wish to have it thoroughly understood that no person will think of putting anything on the plate who cannot pay his debts." The result was an overflowing collection.

Marine Insurance.

Marine insurance is the oldest kind of modern insurance. Its principles were first employed in the fourteenth century by the merchants of Barcelona, in Spain, when that city was the capital of the kingdom of Catalonia and when its hardy mariners were second to none in the world. About the same time, and also at Barcelona, the famous code of maritime laws known as the "consulato del mar" was promulgated, which is the foundation of the present shipping laws of every country.

"THE PALE GIRL."

Did Not Know Coffee Was the Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says: "Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no 'life' in me."

"I was known as 'the pale girl,' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good."

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us."

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee."

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The New School Law.

There have been several suits
filed already in different counties
for the purpose of contesting the Constitutionality of the new school law. We are certain that it fails to guard against colored pupils graduating from the Common school entering the High School that is required to be established in each county.
One or more High Schools must be established and the Fiscal Court shall pay for them as the judgment of the County Educational Board directors. Any pupil is eligible to enter who has graduated from the common schools. Where is the negro excluded? That is one reason why we are opposed to the law.

Another reason is that the separation or control of negro and white schools is not made clear and as a result we have a negro on our school board in this county.

If we had said four years ago that the republicans elected in this county would in less than four years have negroes on the school boards
of the county, they would have replied, "It is the same old cry of Nigger, Nigger, Nigger." So it is,
"Nigger" and wherever possible
they put the "negro" in. How do you like the results in this county?
Don't be backward but shell her out
How do you like it?—Livingston Banner.

world is improving.
The world was never so truth-telling
as it is to-day. Nothing like it ever existed in the past. The commercial life of the world compels truth as nothing has, nothing else can, for it is on its credit and truthfulness that the fabric of our great commerce rests. You may rest assured that there never was so much truth in the world
as there is to-day, and there never was such a real care for truths as there is to-day.—Rev. M. J. Savage.

More Work; Less Play.
Isn't there a suspicion that at the present time Australia might be said to be "unduly pleasure-loving"? When it is remembered that the time is one of grave anxiety; that the sands run rapidly out to give the signal for a struggle for very existence—there seems reason to suggest, for the national good, a little less horse racing,
a little more attention to the serious things of life.—Sydney Bulletin.

Marriage Age is Increased.
It is generally admitted that the marriageable age of women has advanced considerably of recent years.
Many a bride has long felt girlhood behind her before she exchanges her vows at the altar, and there seems to be few young men nowadays who care
to assume the responsibilities of married life until they are in the financial position usually associated with middle age.

Best Way to Tie Shoe-Laces.
A way to keep shoe-laces tied is to make a bow in the ordinary way, then insert a buttonhook underneath the center of the bow and draw one loop
and one end through (underneath),
thus turning the bow practically upside down. Or draw one loop through the other and pull the "answering"
end, so that the loops are knotted.

The New Morality.
So, it's away with your old morality
and your prating about duty, self-restraint, sin and its punishment.
"Science" or "evolution," as the case may be, has shown that to be strong is to be virtuous, that to seize is the aim of life and to let go one's hold the supreme transgression.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Woman Took Dare; Posed on Chimney.
Dared to climb a 125-foot chimney in process of construction at Torrington, Conn., Mrs. Guy Nodine mounted to the top and posed there several minutes, enjoying the view. To get there she had to climb rickety ladders all the way.

Life.
Life is a cocktail, made up for the most part of sweet things, and tinged with a dash of bitterness. We must drain it to the dregs to get at the cherry, just as we must live a full and rounded life to know all its pleasures.—Detroit Free Press.

Persian Easy Language to Learn.
Persian is said to be not a very difficult language. The modern Persian is very much like the English in its sensible rejection of the inflections that burden so many of the world's tongues.

Pharaoh's Mummy.
Pharaoh's mummy has been discovered and unfolded, and the eyes of readers of these pages can rest on the very features on which the eyes of Moses looked 3,000 years and more ago.

Quest of the Age.
We have lost our power to become satisfied with the essentials of life.
Rich and poor alike, we seek wealth
as the greatest promoter to human happiness, the greatest blessing obtainable.—The Queen.

Decline of Nations.
If the big scientist who ascribes the downfall of Greece and Rome to malaria turns out to be correct, what in the world will the commencement orator of the future have to fall back on?

killed it more than a million times myself, and eternity doesn't seem a bit closer."

"Enemies is unsatisfactory. When

The KITCHEN GABINET

A COOK FOR REUBEN.

EUBEN, Reuben, I've been thinking.
Who would get the meals for thee?
If the men were all transported Far beyond the northern sea?"
"Rachel, Rachel, I've
been thinking.
That, in spite of all thy
care,
We would get on very nicely,
Eating lots of caviare."
"Reuben, who'll prepare the blubber?
Who will trim the lamp
just right?
Get thy moccasins all ready
For the long, long Arctic night?"
"We'd take salmon, and we'd dry it.
Eat it when in seal oil swimmin',
Rachel, verily I'll try it.
We could do without ye women."

"Reuben, Reuben, I'd best follow.
Men need cooks, where'er they go;
And I fear, ye soon would find a Wife among the Eskimo."

Chinese Breakfast Food.
There is growing along the coast
of China a soft, sweetish seaweed
which serves a variety of purposes, but which the people use chiefly in soup. It has, however, several uses:
As a barometer it is valuable, varying in moisture as the temperature changes; as a mat for the table; as draperies—everything—finally winding up in soup which is invariably served for breakfast.

Cherry Salad.
When cherries are in season they are very pretty in salads. Remove the pit, refill the hollow with a piece of nut meat. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. Or fill an apple cup with mixed cherries and nuts. The apples will preserve their color and freshness
if kept in water.

Prunes.
This dish should be regarded as a medicine, and eaten whether we like it or not. Prunes are excellent in cases of indigestion, torpid liver, etc. To induce the family to eat them often fix them in a variety of ways—chopped fine and smothered in whipped cream;
in the bread pudding instead of raisins; raw, with nut kernels inside and sprinkled with sugar. All these ways are good and wholesome.

A damp napkin around the sandwiches will not only keep them fresh,
but improve them, allowing the filling to flavor the whole. Always keep a clean old napkin or linen cloth handy,
and make the sandwiches some time before your guests arrive to save that last-minute flurry.

If you use a pulverized or ground coffee you can get an extra fine one from C. H. Moore at 25c per pound.

Blockaded.

Every Household in Hickman
Should Know how to Resist It
The back aches because the kidneys are blockaded.

Help the kidneys with their work.
The back will ache no more.
Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

It's the best proof, for it comes from Hickman.

J. R. Weatherly, Cor. Third &
Ivy Sts., Hickman, Ky., says:
"For some time I was a victim of a most annoying attack of kidney complaint. The kidney secretions were far too frequent in action and I would have to get up, some nights
as often as seven times. In the morning on early arising I felt tired
and little like doing the day's work.
I tried a number of remedies and doctored but no avail. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and procuring a supply at Helm & Ellison's drug store, began using them. The use of three boxes restored my kidneys to a healthy condition and made my general health much better."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo
New York, sole agents for the United States.

FUQUA, HELM & COMPANY

This is one of Mr. Bryan's off-hand shots: "Mr. Taft has begun to threaten. He says if the Democrats win prosperity will not return. He does not hope to convince you; he is trying to scare. A year ago he might have threatened you. You cannot fall off the bed when you are already lying on the floor."

He now calls on Cannon to state how much he is worth and what he has been selling to get it. Cannon has been in public life for about forty years, drawing about $5,000 a year, and is reputed to be worth two or three million dollars. Cannon declined to show up and says his statement was only an outburst of humor. The speaker will, no doubt be more careful in the future when he grows funny.

The Farmers Gin & Grain Company's new gin, in this city, is very much elated over the patronage they are receiving from our cotton planters in their initial effort. From all indications, the investment is a judicious one, and will insure our cotton and corn growers the best of prices in the Hickman market by reason of competition. Whether or not it may be credited to the new gin, we do not know, but more cotton was received in Hickman last Saturday than ever before at this season of the year.

Following a hold up and robbery at Memphis, Tenn., several days ago in which he was severely injured and relieved of all his money. J. B. Trade Announcement of Bush & Gerts and E. E. Forbes Piano Co.

Creates Excitement Among Piano Sellers and Buyers.

The Throwing on the Market Just at This Time the Immense Stocks of Both of These Big Concerns, at Such Sacrifice Prices, Means a Saving of Hundreds of Dollars to Buyers.

BIG SIGNS COVER THE FRONT OF BOTH STORES AND CROWDS READ THE SENSATIONAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Sale Opens Today—Watch the Rush—Bush & Gerts at 156 S. Main. E. E. Forbes, 162 N. Main.

The object of this sale is not to hurt anybody's business or put the "freeze act" into operation as was circulated Sunday after our announcement of such sensational selling prices. It is a pure and simple business transaction where one large concern buys out another with certain trade considerations that demands the selling off of the entire stock of one concern and the clearance of the stock of the other so far as possible.

The business management of both concerns realized that a price cutting had to take place, so after a long conference ordered one of the most sensational disarrangement of prices ever known to any line of business in the history of the South.

PUBLIC BENEFITTED.

Why stop to figure out the "ifs" so long as you are the beneficiary? The deal is made and the sale is on, and if you are the wise buyer you will be among the first to come and select your instrument at almost your own price.

TAKE NOTICE.

Every piano, grand or upright, new or second hand—some of organs, pianoplayers, autopianos, electric pianos are included in this sale. We have not picked out one discontinued style or cheap second-hand instrument and priced it down, but have absolutely placed THE RED TAG on every instrument owned by both big concerns.

NEW PIANOS.

The Bush & Gerts Company had just received a carload of pianos in different styles and cases—the very best output of their enormous factory.

Last week the E. E. Forbes Company received for their fall trade shipment of Chickering, Kranich, Everett, Stultz & Bauer, Cagle-Nelson, Palmer and Thayer pianos.

Without reserve the Red Tag will be found on the entire lot.

YOUR FAVORITE PIANO

Must be among the list that has fallen victim to the Red Tag. So come and see both tags and figure out for yourself the valuable saving.

USED PIANOS.

We have in our enormous stock at both stores some of the world's best makes that have become shopworn or shows use from having been rented; some taken in on exchange in trades. They include grands, squares and upright pianos, orchestras and self-playing pianos.

Every instrument that shows the least use from any cause has been placed in a separate apartment and price put on it that means a sale and a bargain. Ask to be shown to this apartment.

PRICES QUOTED.

While prices on paper do not carry the strength and convey the real blue savings, yet you must grasp the one idea. Some things happened in Memphis.

The Two Kings.

'Twas a wind-swept night in the long ago
In the reign of King A-ris-toe-ri-so.
In the banquet hall where the courtiers sit
Is a feast of soul, is a flow of wit:
But the glass goes 'round 'til the jests grow coarse
And the ribald songs make their croak-ers hoarse.
One by one they drop in their drunken
brawl
'Til a silence falls o'er the glided hall!

Of the courtly host that have gathered there
To rejoice and drink and to drown dull
care,
There remains but one with his senses
clear:
"Ho, ye men!" he cries, "give the king
good cheer!" And he lifts his glass to the drunken throne.
"Ho! A toast! A toast! May the king live long!"
But the lords sleep on and his lordship
cries:
"Let us drink alone 'til the vanquished dies!"

"Keep the glasses filled! 'Tis the king's command!
Fill them up, I say!"—to his servant hand.
"To my host!" he leans, with a mocking head.
"To the king and kingdom," the courtiers
said.
"I will drink you drunk or I'll lose my crown."
Brag the tipsy king as he drinks it down.
"Here's a (hic) a health—and (hic) let 'er go!"
Laps the drunken king, A-ris-toe-ri-so.

Now the ruler's voice it is harsh and thick
And his lids are red as a flaming wick.
"See! His senses reel 'neath the devil's broth.
And his head droops low on the linen cloth.
Crash! The crown of King A-ris-toe-ri-so is
It has fallen off! Cries the courtier, "Ho!
Now behold your king, O ye drunkards
all!
I have won the crown! I am 'AL-COHOL!"

And from then 'til now doth he rule the throne
Doth he drown men's sense and retain his own.
Though they come from near or they come from far,
He is sober still with the fading star,
But the kings go down and the courtiers sleep
In the drunken dregs of Inferno deep—
For the man ne'er lives who at Bacchus
brawl
Can defeat the curse of King Alcohol!

Ferguson Murder Trial

The trial of Robt. F. Ferguson charged with the murder of Robt. Watson, at Madrid Bend, Sunday, July 19, was called at the Court House Tuesday, and occupied Tuesday and Wednesday, and resulted in defendant being sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

There were no eyewitnesses to the tragedy, but the testimony shows that Watson and Ferguson were carousing on Saturday night and during the night made a number of calls. They fell out and in the fight that followed, Ferguson was bested. Witnesses said that Ferguson then went to a tent and tried to borrow a gun from the three young men at the tent. This was refused and witness testified that Ferguson was advised not to go back where Watson was. Ferguson got an axe, saying he was going to cut a club. Upon the renewal of the trouble Ferguson hit Watson with the axe, crushing his skull, from the effects of which Watson died the next day.

A number of witnesses were introduced by the defense to show that Watson was a very dangerous man when drinking.

Attorneys Sam Crossland, of Mayfield, and A. M. Tyler, of Hickman, were employed to assist Commonwealth Attorney Hester in the prosecution.

Attorneys for the defense were: F. S. Moore and H. F. Remley, of Hickman, and R. B. Flat, of Clinton.

Citizens' Meeting.

The citizens of Hickman and vicinity are requested to meet at the opera house, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Sept. 30, for the purpose of discussing and organizing a home telephone system. Local speakers will deliver addresses on subject. Come!

Deacon Snow Writes.

Luzelle, Ky.

Editors Courier:

And it came to pass that a great multitude assembleth at Madrid Bend to hear the priests of the City of Louisville and their sayings of Democracy. And many did come to hear the truth. The wise men talketh long and loud. The ward-healers from Hickman disguiseth their motives and pulleth hard for victory. Henchmen and harmony-preachers from Fulton were there, even as the gum-shoe politicians who asketh high honor in sanctuaries of the First Judicial District. And these cometh not alone, for there were doctors, lawyers, scribes, bootleggers and county candidates—all filled with the vain glory of earthly things, such as feathering of nests with the spoils that followeth the great Democratic victory, Nov. 3. Yea, I could say much concerning the hocus-pocus of the two Annaises of Fulton county—who cometh on this occasion wearing the Democratic robes of purple and fine linen—and were most careful lest the hem of that garment should touch the unclean things of rural politics, which breedeth great corruption in high places and thus cast the pearl before the swine.

What manner of man is he who sayeth that those who sin six days and remembereth the election time to keep it holy, shall not rise again from rottenness and corruption, and receive the blessings of the easily fooled disciples of county Democracy? Much could be said of their down-sittings and up-risings, but I mean to speak of the chosen of Israel—the candidates of Fulton county, whom the Lord loveth, even unto Dave Morgan and Hub Lewis, who cometh forth like a flower in the morning, sweet, refreshing and entertaining. And, lo, retireth at the end of the campaign, tired, dusty, quiet and busied.

Even then, the Deacon loveth him and can suffer him sympathy, for in the early part of his campaign, his friends fill him up with water, hope and the general atmosphere. Thus early in the campaign he swelleth up like a toad, he walketh abroad in the land like he owned the earth, and as though all things were his'n.

He smileth upon all man and woman kind, and sloppeth over with good humor and pleasant jokes. He kisseth the children and scatters microbes among the innocent babies of the country.

Privately speaking, he cheweth a clove when he meeteth a preacher, and as he converses with him in pious tones, he standeth to the leeward and curbeth his breath with a strong bite, talks of the fallacy of infant baptism to one; advocates immersion to another; and approves close communion to all.

He slappeth a man on the back in love and friendship, shaketh the hand of the pretty woman and begs the support of both. He goeth home late at night to his weary wife and with beery breath he hicketh forth without a breakfast, saying, "one of my strong supporters is in town and I must needs see him before he getteth away."

He is gone but a short time, but long enough to have his leg pulled and the dead beat made happy. He giveth liberally to the church, he contributeth to the man whose house is burned; he bestoweth alms, he signeth a note for a friend; he sendeth a small keg hither and a large keg thither; he yieldeth up his substance with apparent alacrity; he sitteth in the amen corner at church, grunts with the brethren and sings "Amazing Grace" as dolefully as if he were attending a funeral in the Mississippi swamps. In one neighborhood, he is a Methodist; in another a Baptist; in another a Christian; in another a Catholic; in another a sinner. He walketh through the corn and tobacco fields, he sitteth on the fence, he talketh of the corn, wheat and tobacco, he sitteth on a log in the woods and speaks of the wonderful growth of the forests and the richness of the land.

He tells secrets to nearly everybody he meets and talks of his opponents and tells the voters of the shortcomings of his opponents but impresses upon them the importance of keeping it a secret.

This goes on from the day he announces himself in the Courier a candidate until the close of the election.

After the election, with a down-cast countenance he goeth back of the barn away out in the field, where nobody can see him and there he kicketh himself and teareth his hair, and throweth his hat against the wall, and calleth himself bad names, jumps and kicks, and goes on until he wearies himself, offers up a prayer and asks the Lord to forgive him for the many lies he has told during the campaign, and promises never again to run for office.

He then goeth back to the house, kisseth his wife and children and begins life anew.

And Its True.

We recently heard a story of the actual experience of a dealer in Fulton county town. It is as follows:

A farmer came into the store one day and bought a handful of nails. "By the way, John," said the dealer, "how is it that you give me so little of your trade nowadays? Is there anything the matter with my goods, or don't we treat you right? What's the matter anyway?"

"Well, I'll tell you," replied the customer "I like you all right, but, to tell the truth, I find I can get about everything in your line so much cheaper from a 'Mail-Order' House in Chicago." The merchant had been thinking a bit on the "Mail-Order" problem and had planned out a campaign.

"Well, John," he said, "Here's what I'll do. If you want anything in my line now I'll sell it to you at the same price and under the same conditions as the Mail-Order House." "I'll go you," came the reply. "I want an axe right now. What's your figure on this one?"

"One dollar."

"But exactly the same thing listed in my catalogue at 80 cents."

"Eighty cents it is," cheerfully twittered the merchant; "but there's twenty-five cents expressage from Chicago, three cents you would spend for a money order and two cents for a postage stamp. Just hand over a dollar-ten, John."

John looked sober; but he was game. "Well," he sighed, "that's one on me. Here's your mon," and he walked over to the counter to pick up his axe.

"Hold on!" said the dealer, as he rung up the cash register. "You pay your money now, and call for the axe in a week. 'Same price and conditions,' you know."

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—over them a simple cold only—you should always keep your lungs healthy, and use the tried and true. Don't blindly suppress it with a sneezing powder. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop's has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or preparations containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now a little late though—Coughs says "Put on the label,
if you are in any Cough Mixture." Good!
Very good! Hereafter for this very reason, cough and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, else it must be true to the label. And it's not only safe, but it is sold by those who know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Dr. Shoop's
Cough Cure

It's a pity when sick ones drug
the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong!
A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly healing Stomach, Heart
and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause

Alaska Wheat a Fake.

Someone has been trying to "string" the farmers of the country. According to the experts of the department of agriculture the exploitation of the so-called "Alaska" wheat, which is said to be about four times the size of ordinary American wheat in head, and to yield "under ordinary soil condition" 200 bushels to the acre, is almost as rank a take as the "Gardiff Giant." For the past few months articles glowingly descriptive of the alleged newly discovered grain, and predicting a consequent revolution in wheat industry of the nation, have been widely published in magazines and newspapers.

A FRONTIER YELLOW SCOOP

How Jack Stice Was Killed Trying to Make News.

The Linville Weekly Express had gone to press. Richard Vinton, an Oxford graduate, was seeking a livelihood by pumping wisdom into the quiet minds of the folk in and about the Missouri hamlet, but he set his best energies to the task. Week after week he filled up his editorial page with the product of a mind endowed to lead mankind, but never a word of recognition had he received for it, save from an occasional exchange that stole his stuff and ran it in as original.

Vinton had all the yearnings of a real journalist to do something to make people talk. But there wasn't "anything doing" in Linville; there never had been. To Vinton's discouraged soul it looked as if there never would be. He remarked this bitterly to Jack Stice, his printer, who had blown in with the autumn winds, and stayed because he got three meals a day, a place to sleep and a few dollars a week for incidentals. Stice had seen all the world he wanted to, and more, and was content to settle down with Vinton, because Vinton let him talk all he wanted and never questioned the authenticity of his yarns. And if you were ever acquainted with the species you will know that their paradise lies in the discovery of a willing listener.

"What we want is a fresh news story," said the printer.
"Of course," said Vinton; "but how in the world are we going to get one if nothing ever happens?"

"Make one."
"I don't like fakes," remarked the editor, with dignity.

"No more do I. Never could abide a pipe dream. Nobody but gossips uses 'em when they commence making copy. I mean to get up something that's genuine."

The overland stage from Glasgow, due at Linville at midnight, was about to cross the Charlton river bridge when a masked man stepped from behind some timbers, and, leveling a gun at the driver, commanded him to halt. The horses were stopped. The experience was a new one to the driver, and he acted as though he wasn't exactly clear as to what his obligations were in the premises. Pending the decision he did nothing. The passengers peered out the windows, and asked what was the matter. It was a moonlight night and the highwayman and his gun stood out clear. The passengers were ordered to get out and line up on the roadside. A man in uniform got out of the opposite door of the vehicle and went around behind it. He had something in his hand that sparkled in the moonlight. The highwayman did not see him. The other passengers obeyed instructions. The driver also got out of his box and stood in the line with hands uplifted. The robber stepped back a little to inspect the line-up critically. The man in the uniform leveled his revolver and fired. The knight of the road turned two startled eyes in that direction, whirled around and fell to the ground. The man in the uniform went to the body, revolver in hand.

"Close call for you, tenderfoot," he said. "Lucky I was along."
All voiced approval. The highwayman was not dead, and they put him on top of the stage, none too gently, and proceeded. The man in uniform was congratulated by everybody, and stood the homage with dignity, as becomes a man above the common run.

The wounded outlaw was taken to a doctor's house, and a curious crowd followed in. When the black mask was removed from his eyes there were cries of astonishment by the townspeople. It was Vinton's printer. There would have been talk of a lynching had not the death bullet done its work. Execrating language fell from the lips of the excited spectators. It was a case of the viper warmed in the kind man's bosom, they said. His evil looks had been mentally noted, some remarked, but they said they had never liked to mention it owing to respect for Vinton's feelings.

When Vinton arrived the dying man turned to him and whispered:

"Good story."
"Good heavens!" exclaimed Vinton, "you didn't do that to get a story?"

A smile flitted over the agonized face.
"I didn't think about a soldier being along. Tell him I don't hold it ag'in him. Was just going to scare 'em a bit and send 'em back their property after paper came out. You'll find 'head' already 'set'—have to change it some—didn't think about this. Better yet. Will make 'em talk. Good-by, old man; you was good to me. Glad to help you."

Vinton stood holding the dead man's hand. The man in uniform touched him.

"It's the queerest thing I ever heard of in all my life."

"What?" asked Vinton, instinctively moving away from the dying man.

"The gun that fellow had wasn't loaded. Say, what sort of gun was he handing out to you?"

"He said he would forgive you," said Vinton, as he folded the chilling hands, pulled the sheet over the dead face and turned away.—Newspaper dom.

SYNOPSIS.

Gerard Chambers, son of a wealthy importer and a student in an eastern college, was awarded a membership in the "Club of the Gemini," a secret organization, founded by Rodney Graves. The society was exclusive, only seven being admitted. The members were known as "Persons." A meeting was held and each member was awarded the "call of destiny," which amounted to an assignment to test his metal. Chambers was told to pass a period as a sailor and not set foot in North America for a year. Then he was directed to go to Mexico for further instructions which were to assign him to another year's exile, during which time he must make his own living unassisted and keep everything a secret. He gained his father's consent. He also acquainted Marcella Bayless, his father's choice for his wife, with the fact that he would be away two years. She left him angrily. Jerry obtained a berth as supercargo on an ocean freighter bound for Uruania, South America, loaded with guns for enemies of that government. Chambers was captured and thrown into a dungeon. Marina Bostons, adopted daughter of Gen. Bostons, ministered to his wounds. Each made a strong impression on the other. Jerry was sentenced to die. Upon promise of Marina's love, Capt. Pilaro freed Chambers. All three united with Gen. Barado's rebels. Chambers being made a captain. Capt. Pilaro died of fever. Marina accompanied his body to burial. In a fierce battle Barado defeated Bostons. Jerry frustrated an attempt to assassinate Gen. Barado. Marina's funeral party was attacked and she was reported missing. Pandaro, capital of Uruania, was captured and a confederacy established. Chambers was made much of. By that time Marina was given up as dead. Jerry was given a big reception by the Uruanian public and awarded the Cross of Honor. He then sailed for Havana in order to report to Mexico City for further instructions. Capt. Chambers was lionized aboard the steamer. He met Senor Lopez, a wealthy Uruanian, and his daughter. The ship encountered a terrible storm while Jerry was being feted. The steamer was dashed on the rocks, nearly all on board drowning. Jerry saved himself and Senorita Lopez by clinging to a mast. The girl's strange actions caused him to express the belief that she was demented.

Senorita Mercedes, who was watched all the time, and who had been sleeping with the unconscious of an infant, talked very little when awake. Her mind seemed to be away from the Pranzos and everybody on it. Jerry offered her food, but she paid no attention to him and ate practically nothing. Once in a while she was overheard to mumble to herself, and occasionally to smile as though amused.

"Her father permitted her to have her own way much of the time," said the captain to Jerry, as they stood behind the girl. "She was a belle in Pandaro, and her frequent visits to Madrid were marked by social triumphs. It is said that she once tried to kill herself because she could not have every dance with a young officer of the Spanish army. People generally considered her eccentric and most unusual, but I don't think they believed her to be insane. Senor Lopez had no notion of placing her in any asylum for the violently demented."

In the middle of the third night on the rock a joyous sound came from the signal station to the brave little party on the wreckage. Jerry Chambers shouted down that a vessel was discerned to the northward, far out at sea. All but three or four of the men, almost delirious with hope, scrambled up the rock.

"She is moving away!" cried one man. "She does not see us!"

"More wood, more wood!" screamed the captain. "She must see us or we are lost!"

All the inflammable material that could be carried up the rock soon was blazing. But still the vessel at sea kept moving away.

"Fire the whole wreckage!" cried Jerry. "It's our only chance in the world!"

It was a matter of but a short time before the heavy timbers of the ill-fated craft began to blaze. So dense became the smoke that the survivors were forced to pick their hazardous way to the other side of the rock. Jerry and the captain succeeded in carrying Senorita Mercedes to a place where the breathing was bearable, but three men who followed them were suffocated and fell to death in the sea below. Jerry, almost overcome by the smoke, managed to reach a place where he could, at intervals of a few minutes, watch the vessel at sea.

"She doesn't see us!" cried he, his hope almost expiring. "She is going away from us!"

It was now that the flames were highest. The wind had shifted so that the only point of observation became untenable. The vast clouds of smoke rolled against the rock and drove the survivors far down the other side. Five other men either were suffocated or lost in their efforts to pick their way.

Jerry managed to get to the northernmost end of the rock, from where he could catch an occasional glimpse of the vessel at sea. He kept his position only a few minutes, but in that precious period he saw a rocket shoot into the sky from the fading object far to the eastward. Another rocket and still another were sent up, but Jerry saw only the first.

"They see us! They see us!" he cried in hysterical ecstasy, as he proceeded to pick his way back to the horror-stricken group.

"Thank God!" went up from every throat. Two of the strongest men collapsed, but Senorita Mercedes, the frailest of all, was unmoved. Her chin resting in her hands, she sat as she had sat for hours, staring to the westward.

It was not until five hours had elapsed that the rescuer could send her boats close enough to the "silent sentinels"—the rocks which stood as monuments to scores—to take off the almost starved and exhausted survivors. It was not until they were on board the vessel that the tremendous strain to which they had been subjected showed its effects. Everybody collapsed, and it was with great difficulty that the ship physician saved the lives of several.

After four days Jerry was able to be on his feet, but his condition scarcely warranted his being out of bed. Senorita Mercedes was in a semi-comatose state for more than a week, and at one time the physician abandoned hope of saving her.

The rescuer was the Pardacina, a freighter of the larger type, having put out of Bagzil, a Pardacian port about 100 miles south of Pandaro, two days before the Pranzos departed from the Uruanian capital. She was in a small port 100 miles from the "silent sentinels" when the great storm came up.

"You carry boxes from Barcedola, I see," said the captain of the ill-fated Pranzos. "Barcedola is not a port of yours, is it?"

"Barcedola was a special stop," said the captain of the Pardacina. (Barcedola was a small port on the Uruanian coast about 350 miles from Pandaro.)

"It isn't usual for the Pardacina to carry passengers, is it?" asked the captain of the Pranzos, noticing that among the boxes were three or four trunks.

"It is the first time in many months that we have had a passenger on board. The trunks belong to a party of four—two men and two women—who have not shown themselves since they got on at Barcedola. Little too much weather, I guess. The men and one of the women say they are public officers and that the other woman is mentally unsound. They are taking her to Havana for treatment."

Jerry Chambers did a great deal of figuring on the slow-going boat. The wreck of the Pranzos had cost him several days, and his heart was filled with fear that he would not reach Havana in time to catch the necessary boat to Vera Cruz. His apprehension was all the more increased when he was informed that the Pardacina would put in four times before reaching the Cuban metropolis, and that the stays in some ports necessarily would run into days.

Jerry had felt himself lucky from the very start, but now he believed that luck was turning against him, and that it would not be within his destiny to reach Calle Coliseo at the appointed noon. The captain of the vessel had told him that in all probability the stop at one of the ports would be so long that Havana would not be reached earlier than June 15. Allowing four days to reach the Mexican port from Havana, and banking entirely on a vessel departing on the day he arrived, he could not figure how he could act according to "contract."

The captain of the Pranzos, in telling of the wreck of his ship, lauded the heroism of Jerry, referring to him as the bravest man he had ever seen in all his eventful life on the water. Now that Senor Lopez was dead, he felt it incumbent on him to see that Senorita Mercedes should be taken to some sanitarium.

"Capt. Chambers," he said one afternoon. "I wonder if you will help me to find a suitable place for Senorita Lopez? I hardly know how to go about such a matter alone."

"It all depends, captain," said Jerry. "It is necessary for me to be in the City of Mexico by noon of the 19th. If there is spare time I shall be glad to assist you, and if I find it impossible to make the desired connection I shall be at your service just the same."

The Pardacina drew up at her pier in Havana late in the afternoon of the 14th. Jerry fairly flew to the offices of the Havana-Vera Cruz Steamship line, knowing that he would have a chance to reach the City of Mexico on time if he could get out of Havana that day.

"Our next sailing is to-morrow afternoon," said the agent.

"By taking that boat how soon can I get to the City of Mexico?" feverishly queried Jerry.

"Allowing that the train out of Vera Cruz is on time, you can get there a little after noon on the 20th."

"It won't do! It won't do!" and Jerry dashed from the office, the agent staring after him in blank amazement.

Jerry hastened back to the Pardacina, where he told the captain of the Pranzos that he would assist in finding a suitable place for Senorita Mercedes. Within an hour a carriage was obtained, and the captain, Jerry, and Senorita Mercedes started for one of the private sanitariums.

Jerry's utter despondency was easily noticed by the captain.

"I am sorry you will not be able to catch a boat to get you to Mexico in time," said he. "Now, if you were only a prince or a Croesus you might get there all right, for a steam yacht has been chartered to make the run to-night. A party of four who came up on the Pardacina are going over to Vera Cruz on the boat. They chartered it while I was at the office of the company a short time ago. To judge from their conversation, they made up their minds in short order to go to Vera Cruz. They had intended stopping in Havana, where they were to place a young woman in an asylum of some sort. Now, as I said, if you were only a prince or a—"

"Where does that boat start from, captain?" cried Jerry, his brain in a whirl and his eyes flashing with a desperate hope.

"Just a few piers from where the Pardacina lies. But you don't expect—"

"Let me out of this rig, captain!" shouted Jerry. "I'm going to try! You can take care of the girl!"

"But, Capt. Chambers—"

The next moment Jerry had thrown the door open and was sprawling on the ground. Without trying to get the dust off his clothes, he started on a run back towards the pier of the Pardacina.

He learned that the steam yacht was to depart at ten o'clock, and that she would make the run to Vera Cruz in three days—time enough for him to get to the City of Mexico!

He explained to the captain of the yacht that he would be willing to pay all the money he possessed if he were permitted to go on the boat.

"There will be but four passengers on this boat to-night," growled the officer. "There are explicit orders that no one else shall take passage on her."

Jerry's persistent appeal angered the officer so much that he ordered him away. He was crestfallen as he slowly went away from the pier, and his hope of reaching the City of Mexico was almost dead.

He had his money exchanged and went into a restaurant, where he ate a meager meal, but where he remained until after nine o'clock. While he had no hope of ever succeeding in filling his "contract," he wandered back to the pier, arriving there about 20 minutes before sailing time. There were men on the deck and men at the gangplank. The thought of stealing his way on board perished almost as soon as it was born, and he was hopelessly miserable.

Fifteen minutes later two men, clad in the height of southern fashion, went aboard the boat, returning to the pier a minute or so later. Each carried a valise to the pier, and the taller of them went on board without his, which he had placed within six feet of Jerry. Both of the strangers went into the office of the company, returning to the boat accompanied by two women. Both of the women were veiled, but under the strong arc light their features could be distinguished. As they passed on towards the gangplank Jerry glanced up. His heart almost ceased beating as he recognized the features of the one nearest him; his flesh seemed to freeze. It was Marina Bostons!

Unable to move for a moment, he stared after her until she was lost in the vessel. The gangplank was immediately hauled in and the yacht began to slip away from the piers.

"My valise!" cried the man who had left it near Jerry.

Jerry's opportunity had come!

"I'll bring it!" he cried, and the next moment he was springing through the air towards the opening in the rail. The grip reached the floor of the boat, but Jerry dropped into the water. One of the crew hooked him out and dragged him to the deck. It was too late for Jerry to jump back to the pier!

CHAPTER XVII.

Michael Aloysius O'Connor.

The gruff captain came out of the cabin and uttered a string of oaths when he beheld the dripping, gasping Jerry standing before him.

"You—you! Didn't I tell you that you couldn't ride on this boat?" he thundered, advancing with set teeth and clenched hands.

"I hauled him out of the water after he saved the man's valise," volunteered the jackie who had used the hook.

"Couldn't you have thrown the valise on without trying to follow it?" roared the officer, now thoroughly infuriated.

"I couldn't let go of it in time," exclaimed Jerry. "Can't you see I'm nearly drowned?"

The loud talking attracted to the deck the man who had left the valise on the pier.

"Who is he? Where is he going?" How did he get on?" he angrily snapped, closely scrutinizing the well-soaked Jerry.

"He fell into the water trying to get your forgotten valise on," said the captain. "To-day he begged me to take him to Vera Cruz. I never saw him before. He said he had some money."

"Why do you want to go to Vera Cruz?" asked the frowning stranger, a tall, yellow-skinned, smooth-faced man wearing a silk hat.

"My brother is—is dying there," lied Jerry, affecting a touch of sadness, "and I didn't want to lose any time in getting to him. I think the soaking I got is worth the trip, but I am willing to give up what little money I possess."

Without another word the stranger went into the cabin, returning almost immediately with his male companion.

"Can't we send him back to the pier?" he asked.

"Yes," answered the captain, "if you are willing to wait until one of my men goes and returns. I can't spare a single man of the crew to-night—below the limit already."

"Well, then, let him stay," said one of the strangers, hurling a hard look at Jerry. "We don't want to lose an extra minute. The start has been late enough as it is." With this on his lips he and the other disappeared into the cabin.

Jerry was heaving a sigh that carried unspeakable relief with it when the captain grabbed him by the arm and hustled him downstairs. "How much money have you?" he snapped.

"About $60 Mex.," was the answer. "I had hoped to work my way over, so that I could care for my brother with the money. It's simply a case of tough luck, sir, that's all."

"Well, you may keep your money—for saving the valise, but you'll have to earn every inch of your way." The captain took Jerry to the engine room, where he turned him over to a kindly-faced, middle-aged engineer.

"Keep him here below," ordered the captain. "Keep him busy all the time."

After the officer had returned to the deck the engineer lighted his pipe, sat down on a stool, and carefully looked the young fellow over.

"Wants you to hustle, eh?" he finally said, in English. They were the first words in English that Jerry had heard since he last talked with Marina, whose knowledge of the tongue was almost as thorough as that of Spanish. "There's a heap of work down here. How'd you get on, anyway?"

Jerry told about the plunge into the water, following with the "dying brother" story. His apparent sadness when he referred to "poor Alexander" touched the engineer's heart and brought forth an expression of sincere sympathy.

"But how comes it you speak English so well?" queried the engineer.

"I'm from New York, but I've been globe-trotting, running, walking and swimming for about a year," was the response.

"I kind o' noticed when you come in that you didn't have the yellow skin. From New York, eh? Well, I'm glad to see you, anyway, and I hate to see you humpin' in this dirty hole. Still, orders is orders, y' know. I wish you was ridin' above, where there's plenty o' chairs. Only four passengers on to-night." After three or four puffs at his pipe he added, with just a shade of longing in his tones: "I'd give anything to be back in God's own waters once more, I would."

"Great waters, those. You're from the States?"

"That I am, lad; and I'm kickin' myself that I ever drifted away from him. Do you know," he went on, casting side-glances, "I've half a notion to leave this boat at Vera Cruz and pick my way back to the States? This captain is a slave-driver."

"He does seem to have a rather mean disposition. Fashionable people on board to-night?"

"One o' the 'petticoats' is a little beauty, she is. Her skin don't seem to be yellow like the others. The captain says she's 'off,' tapping his forehead."

"Taking her to Vera Cruz for treatment?"

"I don't think they intend stopping there, judgin' from the anxiety showed by the min about ketchin' a train for somewhere 'r other."

"Where are they going from Vera Cruz?" and the manner in which Jerry put the question caused the other to lift his brow in mild surprise.

"I don't know."

"The City of Mexico?"

"Say," smiled the engineer, keenly, looking at Jerry for a moment, "what do you want to know for?"

"Oh, merely curious, that's all. I once had a cousin who was a little weak above the eyes."

The engineer answered a signal from above and put on more steam.

"What's your name?" he asked, as he looked at the gauge.

"Tom Flannery."

"A 'shamrock' eh?"

"There's a trace or so of the Irish in me, I guess. I was born in New York, though."

"I was born in Athlone, but hit New York 28 years ago, when I was goin' on twilve."

"Why, you're still in your prime, then."

"Oh, I guess an Athlone man can feel a kick or two lift at my age. You couldn't guess what my name is."

"Flaherty—Fagan—Reilly—"

"Choock in a 'O' afore."

"O'Hooligan?"

"O'Connor—Michael Aloysius O'Connor. Sounds Dootch, don't it?"

"A little pretzely, yes, Well, Mr. O'Connor—"

"Mike—Mike; niver a 'mister' afore my name. 'Gorry, it's loike hiven to hear your voice and the language o' God's own people!"

"Have you been on the water long, Mike?"

"Iver since I was 13. I've roved the world over; I've been to Turkey, I've been to Dover. I niver wanted to keep still."

"Do you still feel that old spirit of venturing about?"

"That I do, lad; and that's one reason why I want to get back to the States, where I can get an ocean run.

One of the Men Dragged Him to the Deck.

This matter o' sailin' between Havana and Vera Cruz is for a child—not for me."

"I wish you could have been with me the last year. I've been about everywhere and its suburb. I haven't been quiet three-quarters of a minute. But, Mike, you can't imagine how good I feel this very minute—talking for the first time in months to a son of Uncle Samuel. It does my soul good."

"The same here, Tommy, my lad, the same here."

"If you should leave the boat at Vera Cruz, where would you go?"

"I'd trim my rig and set sail for—"

Footfalls on the ladder cut the sentence short. The captain came up with a scowl on his face.

"There are some boxes on the deck to be carried into the cabin," said he. "I want the young man to carry them down. Come on, young man."

The next moment Jerry was following the officer to the deck. A tangle of thoughts flashed through his mind and his excitement ran high. Would he see Marina Bostons? Would she recognize him if she saw him? Should he recognize her? As soon as he reached the deck he sent a sweeping glance about him, but saw only sailors.

The boxes, six or seven of them, were near the rail about middeck. The portholes of the staterooms were just a few inches above the deck level, and as Jerry passed on to the boxes he cast glances into the two or three lighted rooms. In one of the rooms he saw the two strange men sitting at a table, their heads close together, and in another he saw the strange woman who had accompanied Marina to the boat. But there was no sign of the "little saint of Uruania." Jerry concluded that she was sleeping in one of the darkened rooms.

The keen-eyed captain watched him carry down four of the boxes, and then went into the cabin. As Jerry was going after the last box he saw a light in the room adjoining the strange woman's. Pretending that the box was heavy and cumbersome, he rested opposite the porthole of that room. Kneeling at a chair and with eyes and hands uplifted was Marina Bostons. Jerry seemed riveted to the spot, and it was not until he heard footfalls behind him that he re-shouldered the box and moved on.

After completing his work he went back to the engine room, and, trying to be as composed as possible, he re-engaged the engineer in conversation.

"I guess you'd best be doin' somethin', Tommy," said Mike, "for the captain's liable to drift along any minute now. He'll soon be goin' to his bunk, and then you can have a let-up. I'll be on duty until eight in the mornin', when a Cuban 'il relieve me. Polish the brass railin'. I'll give you the word when to stop."

The night, mellow in the moonlight, was very warm, and a doorway at the end of the room had been opened to admit air. A ladder led to it. Jerry polished the brass rail for half an hour, when he scaled the ladder to get a breath of fresh air. As he stood with his head out of the hatchway he thought as he never before had thought. When the picture of the "little saint of Uruania" in prayer came back to his tired brain he almost forgot where he was. We watched the twinkling sky above and wondered how he could save the woman who had saved his life. That he was helpless on the vessel he knew well, and he also felt that his every movement was being watched. It was apparent to him that the strangers were with all possible caution, and he believed that he would not be permitted to land until they had spirited her safely away.

"I must save her," he thought, blood rushing to his head. "She's her life for me, and I'll risk mine hers. I'll fight them all if I have to."

He was half way down the ladder when he heard a low conversation stopped and listened as intently as could, but got no drift of the talk. While he could not understand it was being talked about, the tone, decided argument. He cautiously crept up to the top of the ladder again, peeped over the deck. Standing at the rail, with their backs towards him, were the two strange men. His eagerness to hear he lifted his head, and it was but little short of a premeditated deliverance that he was seen when one of the men was around and looked in his direction.

"But why go there at all?" asked. "It is simply an unnecessary matter of tying ourselves up in mountains, where there is absolutely no diversion. I am in favor of remaining in Vera Cruz. We can rid of this business there just as then we can devote all of our attention to the other and take our about it, without having those forever around demanding attention."

"Andre, something has told me. There, there it goes again. Phil always that 'something.' I believe haunts you. Pray, tell me what should fear in this—with a world between us and them?"

"I simply cannot get away from that's all. Things have been too Every sky has a storm stored in some place, you know."

"Come, come, Felipe; we shall one more bottle, and then that 'something' will rest for a bit. With this on his lips Andre took by the arm and led him down the deck."

The meaning of what Jerry had heard, of course, only could be missed, and his efforts to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion taxed his brain so severely that he feared his senses. He soon went to Mike and asked for a drink of water.

"I was just goin' to tell you the captain had gone to his bunk," said O'Connor. "Now you can up as long as you loike, and hunt your own bunk."

Jerry remained with the engine for an hour longer and then slipped out on the floor near the foot of the ladder. He lay there for half an hour, and then, prompted more by recklessness than by anything else, he cautiously scaled the ladder, crawled out on the deck. As he himself that he had not been so silently picked his way down to the porthole of Marina's room, which dark. He brought his face close to the opening, but heard not a sound. He stole back to the engine room, again lay down on the floor. The tense excitement of the day had been too much for his body and brain, he soon was asleep.

SHOOT RATTLER FROM ARM OF CHUM

OF HERBERT DAVIS PROBABLY SAVED BY QUICK ACTION OF HIS FRIEND.

Herbert Davis, aged 14, of St. Louis, Mo., was bitten with a death-dealing snake bite on his arm. The snake was saved by the quick action of Francis Evans, 15, who sent a bullet through the head of the reptile just in time to prevent it from biting Davis. The snake was killed by Evans. The snake was around the arm of the Davis boy who had grasped it under the impression that it was a fish. Francis Evans is the son of Dr. H. Evans. ing and hunting about the ponds of the city. The swimming lake had overflowed and the water filled a basin forming a swimming pool. The overflow had allowed many to escape from the lake and many had been imprisoned in the water. The boys were draining the lake and taking the fish back to the pond. The work of removing the fish was nearly completed, when the boys saw something move under a rock. He promptly grabbed at it, thinking it a fish, shouting as he did: "I'll bet this is a big one." He jerked it up and to his sorrow found a big rattlesnake squirming in his grasp. He attempted to release it, but the snake was too quick, and about his arm and raising its head to strike. Francis Evans was standing beside the little pond, leaning on a repeating rifle which is his companion on such expeditions. When Evans heard the horror-stricken shriek of his companion as the rattler swung back to sink its fangs into the arm of the boy, there was no time for thought. An instant the snake would strike, and the blood of the boy with its deadly poison. Like a flash the rifle was raised and a bullet crashed through the head of the snake and it fell, slowly undulating from Davis' arm. Evans then shot the snake six times, and threw his arms around him and cried from nervous excitement. According to Davis the snake rattled and a button.

WIDE WRITES DEATH STORY.

Describes Effect of Gas as He Gradually Loses Consciousness.

Washington.—Despondent over the death of his wife less than a month ago, Arthur D. Adams, a bookbinder in the government bureau of engraving and printing, formerly of Salt Lake City, took his own life. While gradually losing consciousness he attempted to describe the effects of the poisonous fumes of illuminating gas. Closing all the windows of his room, Adams turned on the three gas jets. His landlady detected the odor of gas. When the door of Adams' room was burst open he was found lying on his bed grasping a pencil and following unfinished note scribbled on a pad:

"I am sinking lower and lower from effects of asphyxiation. My head is burning! The room is dancing before my eyes. Good God, what a sensation! I am being lifted! The light! My God, the light! Her—I am good by—I—"

GIANT FISH SEIZES CALF.

As It Into Deep Water by the Tail and Drowns It.

Fortington, S. D.—Henry Hanson, 40, reports the loss of a calf carried off by a giant pike. The farmer heard a noise among his corn one night and rushed out to look for the trouble, which he found was the canal. He found several calves standing belly deep in water. He noticed one little calf making a desperate effort to pull its tail free from something. The farmer, with his bare legs, was wading toward the calf, and just as he caught it a monster pike lashed out and seized the calf by the tail. He was blinded. Wiping the water from his eyes, he found the calf being dragged toward deep water. Hanson made a desperate effort to reach the animal before it was dragged into the canal, but he failed. The calf struggled until it finally died.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a newborn baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, Le Sueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

Too Hard to Answer. "Look here, my friend," said a traveling man to the hotel clerk, "I want to ask you something." "What is it?" "Why is it that you people always holler 'front' whenever you want a bell boy?" "Why do we holler 'front'?" Why, because—er—simply because it's—Looky here, young feller, do you want to know more about this business than I do?"

Shower of Sulphur.

Charolles, a small town 30 miles from Macon, in France, has recently been visited by a shower of sulphur. The roofs, gardens, fields, vineyards, rivers and ponds were covered with a yellow dust, and for some time the peasants in the fields were troubled by a sulphurous biting odor which made breathing difficult.

THE BEAUTIFUL FACE.

"There is no face so beautiful and fair
Of all the women I meet,
As belong to her of the silvery hair—
No voice to me so sweet,
None other may look with eyes of mine,
And behold the beauty I see,
For the woman who has the beautiful face,
Is all the world to me.

For thirty years I have watched the lines
As they grew on her forehead fair,
And have seen the winters sprinkle the frost
That has changed her nut brown hair;
But time in his change has brought no ill
To the beautiful face I see;
But has strengthened the tie that made us one,
My dear wife and me.

Our life has not been all we could wish,
As we toiled up hill with our load,
But love has kept trying to brighten our path
And cast all stones from the road,
Over the hill-top on the mountain side
We are journeying down,
The sunlight gleams in her shining hair
And it looks like a silvery crown.

Don't flatter yourself that you are popular until you see how quickly
the world forgets you when you are sick. Then compare friendship (?)
with the devotion of the family.

If your friend goes wrong it is base in you to desert him. Then, more than ever does he need your help,
and, on the supposition that he has been your true friend, he is entitled to it. Of course, you can neither approve or condone his wrong-doing.
It may become your painful duty to tell him with the utmost candor what you think of his faults, but never to kick him while everybody else is engaged in the same business. To do that requires no courage—nothing
but a little cheap bluster.

A practical committeeman in presented diplomas last June, to a graduating class spoke as follows:
"Girls, in presenting you these diplomas, if, by their significance you are led to allow your mother to do all the work, bake all the bread, sweep all the floors because you can read Latin or demonstrate a theorem
in geometry, then has your school
been a most unfortunate course, and in all the teachings you have ever received at my hands, I trust there has been no lesson that has weaned you from the dishpan. Boys, if from this graduation you go out into the world too nice to carry wood and swill the hogs, if need be, then has our school failed in its purpose
and sown the wrong seed."

TAKE LIFE EASY.

It would be well if more housekeepers looked upon life in as philosophical a way as an old lady of 80 years
living in New Hampshire, who says:
I never allow myself to fret over things I cannot help. I take a nap and sometimes two every day of my life. I never take my washing, ironing or baking to bed with me,

and I try to oil all various wheels of a busy life with an implicit belief that there is a brain and a heart to this great universe and that I can trust them both.

AN UNSPOTTED CHARACTER.

Money is a good thing, especially in these times, but there is something much more valuable. It is character, the consciousness of a pure and honorable life. This should be a young man's first aim to preserve at any cost. During the past year during the commercial distress,
while many were proved and found wanting, others came forth tried as by fire. Here and there one comes out of the furnace far more of a man than before. Amid the wreck of his fortune he stands erect—a noble specimen of true manhood.
Let it be the aim of every young man, every business man, above all things else, to keep this purity sustained. This is the best possession
—this is a capital which can never be taken from him—this is the richest inheritance. Let every young man who reads this department look at the list of wealthy men, influential men, respected men, who, during the past year have been placed behind prison bars. Men who fell from prominence to disgrace simply because they permitted black spots

to form upon their character.

THE HUSBAND OF THE FUTURE.

Much has been written, of late,
about woman,—the model wife, so we have a word for the model husband of the future. We say "of the future" for the reason that if he exists today we have never had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

The model husband of the future will walk out with his wife on a week day, and will not be afraid of a millinery shop. He will even have "change" when asked for it and will never allude to it afterwards.
He will not be above carrying a large bundle or a cotton umbrella,
or even holding the baby in his lap
in an omnibus. He will go to bed first in cold weather. He will get up in the night to rock the cradle or answer the door bell. He will believe in hysterics and will be easily melted to a tear. He will patch up a quarrel with his wife with a velvet gown and drive away the sulks with a ride in the automobile. He will never get out of humor because a few buttons are missing when he goes to dress, neither will he bring home friends for supper. His clothes will never smell of tobacco. He will respect the curtains and never smoke in the house. He will be innocent of any latchkey. He will let the family go out of town once every year while he remains at home with one knife and fork, sleeps on a curtainless bed and washes his own dishes and socks. Watch for one model husband for he is surely coming.

A young girl errs once and the doors of human kindness and love are closed against her. But we reach the betrayer our hands and bid him welcome to our homes; we court and flatter him, and sacrifice our darling daughters to his greed, for
is it not a sacrifice of love, purity and everything worthy to wed such a one? Does God even smile upon such a union? If either be shunned, why not the betrayer of youth and innocence, rather than the one who has been wronged so grievously?
We know that lips will curl with scorn, and society will sneer, it we reach our hands to the outcast, but God and the angels will be glad,
and if a soul be thus saved, what matters it?

of this fruit will show that it is infested with white grubs, which eat
into the kernel and cause it to drop.
The work is very similar to the plum curculio, which is such a serious pest
in the eastern states.

This insect, however, is a native
western form and finds its way into our plum orchards from the patches of wild plums which grow along almost every creek.

It is a very difficult insect to combat, because the work is done inside
the fruit, and poisons cannot be applied for the larval forms of the insect. The adult insect can sometimes be killed by spraying the plum trees
with arsenate of lead or other poisons
of a similar nature in the same way that apple trees are sprayed. The adult beetles eat the young leaves or cut off the stems of the young fruit,
and poisons placed in these localities
are likely to prove helpful remedies.
The adult beetles may be caught by jarring the trees. The insect "plays possum" when a limb is jarred and drops to the ground. If the ground is covered with sheets, the insects may be gathered in them and destroyed.
This is best done early in the day and should be continued from the time the plum trees are in blossom until the first of June.

The insects are reddish brown snout beetles about a quarter of an inch in length. They are quite easily recognized, and if present, some will be found usually each morning. A few jarrings of the tree will indicate whether or not the insects are numerous and whether this remedy should be continued. Probably this remedy is the most useful one in the home orchard or garden.

It is a good plan to permit chickens
to run around about the trees, since they often pick up the weevils or the larvae that have come to the ground.

During the summer all plums which fall from the trees and even those which show the marks while they are still on the trees should be taken and destroyed. By destroying we mean burning or some other method which will make sure that the insect inside
the plum is killed.—S. Arthur Johnson, Associate Professor of Entomology, Colorado Agricultural College.

PLANT THE RIGHT TREE.

Write and Get Information from the Agricultural Department.

In every region of the United States
there is at least one forest tree, and generally there are several forest trees which can be planted with a complete assurance of commercial success if the plantation is properly established and given proper care. The government has made a very careful study of most of the forest plantations
in the United States. Its publications on tree planting may be had free of charge upon application to the forest service, United States department of agriculture, Washington. The studies on which they were based were made especially for the benefit of farmers and other land owners, and to prevent the waste of thousands of dollars annually lost by planting the wrong trees
or by improper care of plantations.

From the manner in which our natural timber has been cut it is clear that each region will have to be made as nearly self-supporting in timber growth as possible. The lesson of the past is that the right forest trees grown in the right way will bring a big profit.

Making the Garden Pay.

Speaking of how he arranges a succession of garden crops, J. W. Griffin, the Kentucky gardener says: "Plant
beans (bush), dwarf peas, early beets, lettuce and radishes in a block, as they may all be cleared from the land
about the same time and another crop planted. This is where I plant my celery, after manuring the ground properly. When the beets are ready to begin using I put a row of cabbage plants right by the beets, then pull the beets next to the cabbage first."

No Such Plum.

Some people are constantly looking for some variety of plum that the curculio will not touch. When that variety is discovered it will be one that a human being will not touch either.

Cultivate Frequently.

Frequent cultivation is not only best for the young orchard, but also for young evergreens set out for a wind-break. Sod-bound trees of whatever kind bake and dry out in the July and August sun.

Herkimer in Bronze.

Herkimer, N. Y.—The bronze statue of Gen. Nicholas Herkimer of revolutionary fame which has recently been erected here represents the general,
with his leg shattered by a bullet,
seated on the stump of a tree directing the American forces in the battle of Oriskany. The sculptor is Burr C.
Miller. The piece was on exhibition in the salon in Paris this year and was the only one of 400 pieces in bronze to receive honorable mention.

Gen. Herkimer was at the head of 800 hastily recruited militiamen and volunteers, most of them his friends and neighbors, who set out in July, 1777, to take relief to Col. Gansevoort and his 750 followers in Fort Schuyler. St. Leger's forces had marched up the St. Lawrence on the Canadian side, crossed over at Oswego and, passing through the Mohawk valley, were investing the fort. St. Leger's forces consisted of 800 white men and 1,000 Indians, the latter under the command of the famous Brant, head of the Six Nations.

Gen. Herkimer sent word to Col.
Gansevoort of the relief that was coming and asked that a sortie be made from the fort when the relieving forces came up, so that the enemy's attention
might be distracted.

When he got near the fort Gen.
Herkimer waited for the signal from Gansevoort. It didn't come, and his young recruits began to chide him for the delay. He refused at first to risk the sacrifice of life which he knew an advance with his 800 men would entail.

He continued to wait, but the remarks of some of his officers and soldiers became more insulting. They accused him finally to his face of being a coward and a Tory. The end of it was that against his better judgment he gave the order to advance.

St. Leger had heard of his arrival and had sent a detachment to intercept him. As the militia advanced in hasty march through a wooded ravine near Oriskany the British regulars in ambush at the other end and the Indians on both sides opened fire. The rear guard of the Americans was cut off from the main body and was dispersed.

Early in the conflict Herkimer had his horse shot from under him and a little later a bullet shattered his left leg just below the knee. When his friends urged him to leave the field he replied:

"No, I will face the enemy."
He ordered the saddle removed from his fallen horse and had it placed on a stump near by. Seated on this, with the wounded leg, which had been hastily bandaged, hanging from one side, he issued his orders and received the reports of his subordinates.

With his friends and neighbors falling on all sides of him, and suffering agonies himself, he coolly took his tin-der box, steel and flint from his pocket and lit his pipe. The statue shows him with the pipe in one hand, while with the other he is directing his forces.

His coolness infused new ardor into the men. They fell to fighting the Indians and British in their own fashion from behind rocks and trees, and finally, aided by a sally from the fort,
they forced the attacking party to retreat. About one-third of the militia fell on the battlefield and many more were carried into captivity.

Herkimer was carried on a litter to his house, 35 miles away. The amputation of his leg was badly done and he died ten days later. In his last moments he called for a Bible and read to those about him the psalm beginning:

"O Lord, rebuke me not in thy wrath, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure."

The base of the statue is a boulder
from the battlefield of Oriskany.

This Gray Old World.

A certain young man was once permitted to make the world over to suit himself; the world and all that in it was.

And when he was done, he stood back and surveyed his work and exclaimed: "A paradise! Ah, truly, a paradise!"

But at the end of a week he was found dead and the verdict of the coroner's jury was that he had been bored to death.—Puck.

Rotted Off by Beer.

This is not a temperance treatise, but it has a bit of fact in it. What the total abstainer may show to the beer-drinker whenever occasion offers. The attention of the New York hospital surgeons has been called to the big number of bartenders that have lost several fingers from both hands within the past few years. The first case was that of an employee of a Bowery concert hall. Three of the fingers of his right hand and two of the fingers of his left were rotted away when he called at Bellevue one day and begged the doctors to explain the reason. He said that his duty was to draw beer for the thousands who visited the garden nightly. The man was in perfect health otherwise, and it took the young doctors quite
a time to arrive at any conclusion.
But they did finally, and it nearly took the beer man's breath away
when they did.

"Your fingers have been rotted off," they said, "by the beer which you have handled."

Other cases of a similar nature came rapidly after this one, and today the physicians estimate there is an army of employees of saloons whose fingers are being ruined by the same cause. The acid and rot in the beer are said to be responsible.

The head bartender of a well-known downtown saloon says he knows a number of cases where beer drawers have, in addition to losing several of the fingers of both hands, lost the use of both members. "Beer will rot iron, I believe," he added. "I know and every bartender knows that it is impossible to keep a good pair of shoes
behind the bar. Beer will rot leather as rapidly almost as acid will eat into iron. If I were a temperance orator I'd ask what must beer do to men's stomachs if it eats away men's fingers and their shoe leather. I'm here to sell it, but I won't drink it,
not much."—New York Mail.

Obituary.

On the 13th day of September,
the death angel visited the home of James Williams and wife and took from them the light of their home,
their little daughter, Elvira Irene.
Little Elvira had only been with them one month and four days, but long enough to endear her to the hearts of the father and mother,
who are heart-broken over their loss.
Little Elvira was laid to rest at Beech Grove cemetery.

To them we extend our heart-felt sympathy, and point them for comfort to Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of heaven." May God comfort the sad hearts and enable them to say "Thy will, not mine, be done."
